Stream Reeks With Filth, He Says, and Contains Bacilli in

Mr. Gilmer refers to a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, in which it is said that in two recent examinations of Potomac water made by the biochemical laboratory of that department no tvphoid bacilli were found. Owing to the esults of this analysis, Mr. Gilmer thinks that it is more than doubtful whether this water is the cause of so much typhoid fever in Washington,

Health Officer's Opinion.

Dr. William C. Woodward, the Health Officer, said today in reference to the matter that in he inspection of cases of typhoid fever reported to his department, investigation of the milk supply of he family was always made. He said that within the last six months about thirty cases had been traced to milk, but that the great majority of cases were due to some other cause, and he believed it to be Potomac water.

Dr. Woodward said that milk could only be the indirect vehicle for the $15, transmission of this disease. He said that typhoid fever is not a disease affecting cattle and, therefore, could not be transmitted through milk in the same way as tuberculosis. Dr. Woodward thinks that milk is not, and cannot be the chief cause of the prevalence of typhoid fever in a city so large as Washington. He said that in a small village, where the milk supply was derived from where the milk supply was derived from a single dairy and there happened to be typhoid fever on the farm, the conditions would be different.
